Depreciation is the allocation of the cost of an asset over its useful life. It is a non-cash expense that reduces taxable income. Depreciation is calculated based on the cost of the asset, its useful life, and the depreciation method used. The IRS provides several methods for calculating depreciation, including the straight-line method, the declining balance method, and the accelerated cost recovery system (ACRS). The straight-line method is the simplest and most commonly used. It involves dividing the cost of the asset by its useful life to determine the annual depreciation expense. The declining balance method allows for a higher depreciation expense in the early years of the asset's life. The ACRS method allows for even higher depreciation expenses in the early years. The IRS also provides special rules for depreciation of certain types of assets, such as real estate and qualified timber property. For more information on depreciation, see the IRS website or consult a tax professional.
